

International Action Weeks Against Racism

11th March to 6th April 2019

100 per cent human dignity – together against racism

The “International Action Weeks Against Racism” are part of a nationwide campaign of action demonstrating solidarity with the victims – and opponents – of racism. In November 2018, the Mayor of Dresden, Dirk Hilbert, called upon the people of the city to participate in the action weeks: “Violence or equally inhuman verbal abuse towards those of different cultural origins or faiths which, in the opinion of some, do not belong here, are sadly still to be witnessed openly in Dresden. That contradicts the liberal democratic principles of our society and also taints the image of our city.”

It is thus imperative that we show what the majority of Dresdeners stand for:

Namely for peaceful coexistence and solidarity in a city in which all people can lead a secure life in dignity and justice, irrespective of their national, cultural, religious or social background. Our city must not be left to those who spread racism and discrimination, whether openly or covertly. It is essential for the future and for communal harmony in our city that we address racism and hostility towards individual groups within our community and consciously display our rejection of exclusion and discrimination.

A diverse programme of around 100 events has evolved in line with the motto “Europe chooses human dignity”. These events have been organised by a broad spectrum of associations, institutions, initiatives, democratic parties, action groups and individual citizens.

You are warmly invited to join us!

The International Weeks Against Racism in Dresden are kindly supported by the Foundation for the International Weeks Against Racism.

What exactly is racism?

Racism is a specific form of inhumanity and discrimination.

Racism is understood to describe negative and derogatory attitudes and actions towards another group of people. Social, cultural or even physical characteristics are arbitrarily associated with primarily negative traits, aspects of behaviour or abilities.

The objective of racism is to preserve power structures and privileges, and to legitimise their unequal distribution. Racism is manifested in many ways, whether in the form of everyday negative bias and exclusion, on the level of individual attitudes and prejudices, as institutional discrimination, e.g. on the job market or in administrative practices, right up to personal insults, derision and violence.

Organisational note:

The International Action Weeks Against Racism in the City of Dresden comprise a series of independently organised events for which thanks are due to many separate organisers.

Responsibility for the content of individual events lies with the respective organisers. They are correspondingly responsible for all organisational matters as well as for the content and statements conveyed through their events. The opinions expressed are not always those of the City of Dresden. The City of Dresden here acts solely as a coordinator and assumes no responsibility for activities which are not organised by municipal institutions under its control.

The organisers reserve the right to make use of their legal entitlement to impose house rules and thereunder to exclude or deny access to their events to persons who belong to right-wing extremist parties or organisations, can be viewed as belonging to the right-wing extremist scene or have already in the past drawn attention to themselves through racist, nationalist, anti-Semitic or other contemptuous statements or language.
