Dual study programmes at the City Administration

Dresden City Administration is currently supporting more than 60 students on dual study programmes in various disciplines, combining a higher education course with practical training. A dual study programme offers you the perfect basis for a future career as a public servant.

While still studying, you gain practical experience in a wide range of positions, for a seamless transition into professional life. During the three-year course, all issues will be directly handled by our training manager.

Another of the many advantages of a dual study programme is the attractive pay you receive throughout the course. Along with its municipal enterprises, the City of Dresden offers you a broad range of regulated professions and courses to choose from. Information on the subject areas we are currently advertising for, how to apply, and apprentices' and students' own testimonials and insights can be found at www.dresden.de/ausbildung.

What do we offer?

Key characteristics of study programmes with Dresden City Administration:

- pay in line with current wage for aspiring civil servants
- entitlement to 30 working days of holiday leave per calendar year
- attractive regulations on retention
- events to mark the beginning and end of placements for all apprentices and students
- various forms of work experience in City Administration departments
- study programme follows a structured plan and entire practical curriculum is guaranteed to be carried through by the office employing you
- competent and motivated training staff
- you are involved in public relations events and other projects with individual responsibility, practical relevance and contact with citizens
- "touring" training – gain experience from foreign work placements, exchanges or educational trips abroad
- discounted Jobticket for local public transport
- workplace health promotion, city sports club
- chance to take educational leave

All applicants will be treated equally. People with a foreign passport can apply to carry out an apprenticeship or degree course at the City Administration, and are more than welcome here.
